

Before I Was Two

Well, I'm a young cowboy, I'm barely just five
More than 60 long months I've been living my life
And many's the sad story and tale I could tell
And many's the hard lesson I've learned, learned it well
They said, "Do what I say;" I say, "I say what I do!"
But that was before I was two

Well, I roamed and I rambled through kitchen and yard
I just took life easy, things never seemed hard
I thought when they said "wrong," they really meant "right"
I thought that all mommies liked to stay up all night
I thought it was "me" and not so much "you"
But that was before I was two

Well, I got me a brother and good times abound
But sometimes at supper we just goof around
But when I was younger it seemed goofy was cuter
Now my parents are stricter than ever they used-ter
I could throw what I ate and I ate what I threw
But that was before I was two

Now, I feel quite grownup, I say "thank you" and "please"
I can swim and play baseball, I can count up by three's
But back in the old days, boy, them old days was fine
I'd hang out with mom and we'd have a great time
And I'd nurse the day long, sometimes the night through
But that was before I was two

Well, I'm just about finished this old cowboy song
Just a few more short lines, I'll be poking along
I gotta pick up my legos and clean up my room
And get ready for bed 'cause tomorrow there's school
Boy it used to seem life was too good to be true
But that was before I was two
